Miami FL (PRWEB) March 10, 2010 -- In the globally competitive world of professional basketball, the needs of players, coaches, and sports franchises, has changed dramatically. BasketballEye.com, a revolutionary international communication forum, is designed to help players with exposure, and coaches, recruiters and agents, with searching for talent.

A multi-media tool focused on being a central database of information for members of the basketball community, basketballEye.com will focus on distributing information to the “right people” by bridging the gap between players looking to play for professional basketball teams across the planet, and teams who are looking for talent on a daily basis.

BasketballEye.com’s core message is simple; Be Seen, Be Connected, Be without Boundaries. “We have created a global network for both basketball players and coaches” says BasketballEye.com’s founder and CEO, Jermaine Skeete “The transfer of information has gone from a week in the mail to a click of a button.”

The membership-based site will provide services to players, coaches and agents alike, where they will be able to exchange statistics, player biographies, and game footage; while also serving as a forum to keep members up to date on important events and opportunities to gain exposure.

“There has never been a better way to get all of my players' information to teams from around the globe.” says Greg Foster, Agent and Former NBA Player “Basketball Eye has created a system where the player, coach, agent and team can all benefit.”

Basketball Eye is the place where the basketball world comes together.
